the men all entered at the same door and took thir seats on the right side of the building the women entered at the another door and occupied seats on the left side of the house they wore uniform sipmle dresses the spectators were arranged on benches against the wall.men

The life of kentuckians now compared to the life of the early shakers of america are similar in a few ways. One is that they both (mostly) didn't descriminate against race, age, gender, etc. , " Men, women, and children, old and young, black and white, began to dance."(source 1) This shows they weren't racist, sexist, ageist, etc. just like how most modern kentuckians are today. Another way they were similar is they didnt want to fight just like (most) modern kentuckians. , " They have refused to fight during wars. They view all men as brothers." (source 2) This shows they did not want to fight.

The life of Kentuckians today are similar to the Shakers in the past because we still go to church and we worship God. The life of Kentuckians are different to the the Shakers because they refer to one another as brother or sister and they have rules they all have to follow.

different from life for the early shaker in america is all shaker communitie must follow the same rules,member should refer to one another as brother ot sister male and femal, member must not walk past one auther on the stair

Life for Kentuckians today is both similar and different because. It is similar by in source 2 says "Take good care of what you have. Provide places for your things, so that you may know where to find them, at any time, by day or by night . . . ; and be kind to the poor and needy." It is different because in source 3 it lists such as "Shakers must live in their own communities, apart from other people," and "Members should refer to one another as "Brother" or "Sisters."

how our life as kentickians now and then is simalular and different is source 2 is alike today cause u can worship who you want and how there different is scource 1there is no more shakers today and ay that time there was Life today for Kentuckians is similar to life for Shakers because most people in Kentucky are religious and may even farm still.

The Shakers wore uniform simple dresses to dnces. Toady people wear crazy dresses. The Shaker communities have remained true to the ideas of peace taught by Mother Ann Lee. Today Kentuckians have not remained to the true ideas of peace taught by Mother Ann Lee. SHakers had to live in their own communities, apart from the other people. Today Kentuckians live cose together and go to each others houses. Shaker furniture as simple and as wellll made. Todays furniture is really modern but is also made well. In 1811 Shakers at PLeasant Hill, Kenucky, accept Black peopleas equal members of the community. Kentuckians stil try to accept Black people as equal people and treat everybody the same.

it is defferent today because in the past they had these groups of pepole that are cald shakers and we do not have those enymore.and people have to get permission to travel. a boy or a girl can not walk past one anouther on the stairs.

Life for kentuckians is simuler and defferent becasue a simularthey is that they had jobs and we have jobs now too, a defferens is we dont do the same stuff as jobs then they did then.

Life of Kentuckians & Early Shakers in America

Practice Set 2

They both danced. and they both make furniture. they both maked crops.

Life for Kentuckians today is both similar and different to life for the early Shakers in America. I know this because the text says, " Shakers ... accept Black people as equal members of the community.". This means Kentucky today and early Shakers in America are similar because both are accepting to all races. The text says, "Mother Ann and some of her followers are jailed in New York because of their beliefs.". This means Kentucky today and early Shakers in America are different because Kentuckians don't get jailed for their beliefs.

In the early Shakers in America was hard for them but after the American revolution there belifes were protected by the U.S. constion

First the Shakers did alot of worships and kentuckians dont really do worships.Second they are from England and we are from Kentucky.

kentuckians today

- can have an beliefs
- you don't have to get permission to travel outside the community.
- you don't have to get all letters written or received by members approved

early shakers

- have to get letters witten or received by members approved
- they have to have the same beliefs
- they have to have premission to travl outside of the community

they are both same

- we both go to school
- we both have beilefs
- we both have communities

Life for Kentuckiens and Shakers are both similar and different.

Kentuckiens and Shakers are similar because just like in Kentucky now, they still sell and grow seeds and crop like the Shakers.

All though they are similar they are also different. They are different because now we don't usually call people father, mother, sister, or brother that is not related to us.

the united states believers was a religion group that started in england

Life for Kentuckians today is similar to the early Shakers in America because in Source 4 it says " Shaker furniture was simple and well made. Many beds in the 1800s had tall post. The Shakers believed that tall post wasted wood, and so their beds had short post." Also, in Source 5 it talks about "Seed business in Shaker communities" and its similar to Seed Business today.

they had different beliefs which lead them to be mistreated and jailed for it. They also had to travel a lot because of them getting mistreated and people judging their beliefs, And also had to buy slaves to free them from slavery.

One way they are similar is they have to grow thier crops to sell. One way they are difrent is that Kentuckians today have the U.S. Constusion to protect them , but early Shakers in America would sometimes go to jail because of what they believe.
